

Pick Up for Church, Script

I do think it's time to teach people to ask the question after they make the introduction.

Here's the question. Very politely say,

“We want to talk you into doing something for us”

We would like to ask you to check out our (pick up for church program or ministry). If you're not comfortable, we'll probably never ask you again.

But here's what we do.

Will give you a text message the night before, then we come by and knock on your door say about 9 o'clock, I'll pick you up and grab some coffee on the way or we have coffee at the church then we introduce you around. Meet the Pastor, etc.

Then afterwards, if you want to, we treat you to a meal or Pollo Loco.

And we let you know how our church could serve you and “let our offering of services are as a church to the community.”

Many people will say I have a car. I could make it there. But they don't usually make it.

So you say “well that would be OK,” but it would mean everything to us cause we would get to know you a little better and we could introduce you to people and then have a nice meal afterwards ,and let you know our offering of services at the church ,if you want to.
